

Post-Course Reflection

The level of knowledge gained throughout this course aligned perfectly with what I had initially set out to learn. I also remembered having asked for more exercises, and on this point I was pleasantly surprised, it was even better than I had imagined. The project, too, went beyond my expectations, as I would never have thought that we could tackle something of that scope as a university project. I truly appreciated it, as it gave us a concrete glimpse into what finance really looks like in practice.

Through the lectures, the project, and the exams, I was able to develop a broad and solid understanding of a wide range of tools used in Finance, including the pricing of options, interest rates, and swaps... which significantly expanded my technical knowledge base.

What I appreciated most, however, was not simply the theoretical exposure, but the direct, hands-on application of these concepts, whether through in-class exercises, exams, or the project. The project in particular stood out as both enriching and challenging, as it pushed me to go beyond a purely theoretical understanding and to grasp how these instruments actually function in practice.

Overall, the course was demanding — dense in content and fast-paced — requiring quick comprehension and sharp analytical thinking at every stage, from lectures to assessments. That said, I found this challenge genuinely stimulating and believe it made the learning experience all the more rewarding.

In terms of the grade I believe I deserve, I would say 8.5/10. My engagement throughout the course — across lectures, exams, and the project — as well as my understanding of the material, were consistently strong, and I feel this score fairly reflects my overall contribution and performance.
